

The project “Parenting Stand-up” was created with a mission to bring parents and professionals together, in order to identify the barriers that hinder parental involvement and to think collectively for solutions that can enrich the life of children and young adults.

In the two years that the project lasted, many things have been accomplished. The project managed to bring together people from different countries and subsequently different cultures to collaborate harmoniously, to communicate with each other and above all to establish friendships. It also raised awareness amongst the participants about the issues that need to be resolved or could be supplemented in daily life, and encouraged all participants to think outside of the box as creativity is essential in parental involvement. Moreover, participants felt valued and enriched, as the overall experience during the project delivered new knowledge and new methods of problem solving and better parenting. The project fulfilled all its goals and then some, as it provided experiences for each participant that will remain forever with them and will act as internal motivation to continue to be active about protecting the right to education and welfare for all children. Parenting stand-up has opened new doors and pathways to a stronger parental presence in all aspects of life and education, and we feel that this was only the beginning to bigger and greater things.

The Parenting stand-up project is funded by the European Union through the Erasmus+ program. Key Action 2. Strategic Partnerships in the field of adult education.
